A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on October 31, 2007 has been entered.

Claims 34-36, 38, and 74-77 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Saul et al in combination with Chen et al. Saul et al teaches a method such as claimed except epicardial placement (see column 3, line 38 to column 4, line 17). Chen et al teaches the desirability of ablating on the epicardium or the endocardium. It would have been obvious to, the artisan of ordinary skill to employ the epicardial placement of Chen et al in the device and method of Saul et al, since the device and method of Chen et al is applicable to both epicardial and endocardial treatments, or alternatively to use the low temperature and high temperature device and method of Saul et al in the device and method and device of Chen et al, since this provides more reliable ablation of accessory pathways, as taught by Saul et al, thus producing a device and method such as claimed.

Claims 40 and 78 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Saul et al in combination with Chen et al as applied to claims 34-36, 38, and 74-77 above, and further in view of Swanson et al. Swanson et al teaches the desirability of ablating on the epicardium and that less than half the total number of electrodes can be used. It would have been obvious to, the artisan of ordinary skill to employ the method and device of Swanson et al in the combined method and device of Saul et al and Chen et al, since this will allow greater control of the lesion size, thus producing a method and device such as claimed.

Claims 41 and 79 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Saul et al in combination with Chen et al as applied to claims 34-36, 38, and 74-77 above, and further in view of Ben Hain et al. Ben Hain teaches drawing tissue into a suction well prior to ablation. It would have been obvious to employ the device for and step of drawing the tissue desired to be ablated into suction surrounding the ablating elements since this allows the catheter to remain stable while the tissue is ablated, thus producing a method and device such as claimed.

Claims 80 and 81 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Saul et al in combination with Chen et al as applied to claims 34-36, 38, and 74-77 above, and further in view of He et al. He et al teaches determining tissue parameters by cooling the tissue. It would have been obvious to employ the device for and step of cooling the tissue since this is equivalent to the use of heating energy to do so, as taught by He et al, thus producing a method and device such as claimed.

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 33-36, 38, 40, 41, and 74-81 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
